

Reed College Consent to Participate in Research
Experiences of disabled USians in the contingent workforce

My name is [REDACTED] from Reed College. I am conducting interviews with disabled contingent workers as part of my senior thesis research. You have been asked to be a part of my research project because you identify as disabled and do contingent work. If you agree, I will be audio and video recording today's activities.

Your participation will require about an hour. You will earn $15 for participating. If successful, this study may contribute to our understanding of the anthropology of work and disability.

The information collected in this research project will be kept confidential. Your name will not be included in my notes or published work. You will be identified using a pseudonym in published work, unless you are a public figure and we discuss using your name. Data from this study will be stored in a secure folder on my personal computer. Any identifiable information (e.g., your name, contact information, recordings, etc.) will be accessed only by myself on my personal computer. I am not a mandated reporter and will not contact legal authorities for any reason.

Your participation in this study is entirely voluntary. You may refuse to answer individual questions or to engage in individual activities. You may also discontinue all participation in this study at any time and still receive $15.

Concerns about any aspect of this study may be referred to Professor Charlene Makley, thesis advisor, makleyc@reed.edu, or to the Chair of the Reed College Institutional Review Board, Professor Kevin Holmes, kjholmes@reed.edu.
