

Recruitment materials

Graphic for social media:

Paid participation in a study of disabled adults with unconventional jobs

Participants must:

- identify as disabled, D/deaf, neurodivergent, or chronically ill (no diagnosis necessary)
- live in the US or US territories
- be 18+
- do any work that is not a full-time job (including temp work, independent contracting, freelancing, gig economy, self-employed)

Participants will:

- attend one 1-hour interview on a video conferencing platform of your choice
- be sent a $15 e-transfer

Email me ([redacted]@reed.edu) or DM me (@[redacted]) if you're interested in participating. Contact to learn more

Statement for social media:

Hello everyone! I'm [redacted], a senior at Reed College working on my thesis research project. I love my online disability community, and I've noticed that many of us find work outside traditional full-time jobs. I am interviewing disabled people in non-conventional jobs about their experiences and I need to find people to talk to! Interviews will be online, around an hour, and you'll be given $15 for your participation. If you're interested in talking to me, please email [redacted]@reed.edu.

Email template:

Dear [potential participant],

I am [redacted], a senior anthropology undergraduate student at Reed College in Portland, Oregon. I am currently working on my senior thesis, a year-long project where I produce original research. I am interviewing disabled people working outside of traditional full-time employment about their experiences, and I would greatly appreciate the opportunity to talk to you. [If a public figure, talk about their work/activism]. Interviews will be around an hour in length, take place on a video conferencing platform of your choosing, and you will be given $15 for your participation. I understand that you may not be interested in working with me if I cannot compensate you properly, and I regret that I can only offer a small incentive.

I am dedicated to building an ethical research practice, and my project is being overseen by a faculty advisor along with the Reed Institutional Review Board. I will record the interview or take detailed notes according to your preference. You will be identified by a pseudonym in published work. [If a public figure, given the option to be identified by name].

If you are interested in participating in my project, please let me know what dates and times are the most convenient for you. I am happy to answer any questions you have by email and during the interview.

Thank you,

