This course asks, how was the struggle for decolonization in the British Empire shaped by the politics of race? How was human difference theorized and how did imperial racisms constrain the possibilities for freedom in a post-imperial world?

To answer these questions we will examine freedom struggles in the British Empire, from the end of World War I to the present day. The course seeks to investigate experience, politics, and ideas. Thus, we will consider the experience of colonialism and the meanings of freedom, the question of how independence was won, and also how decolonization was a project of “world-making” that is, imagining the world beyond the hierarchies of empire. We will decenter the national frameworks of traditional decolonization narratives both by exploring the challenge of diversity within the colony/nation as well as transcolonial and international movements to instantiate freedom. We will consider the legacies of colonial rule that continued after formal independence and the ongoing struggles for decolonization that exist in multiple sites and take multiple forms.
today. Throughout, we will pay attention to the ways that race and racisms operate through gendered difference.

Objectives

Students will be encouraged to:

- Become familiar with theories of race, racism, and decolonization;
- Think historically across space in comparative and connective ways;
- Gain an understanding of the British Empire and movements for decolonization;
- Identify and evaluate the mechanisms of decolonization and the continuities of empire;
- Strengthen critical reading skills through discussion, interpretation, and analysis of a range of scholarly and primary sources;
- Strengthen discussion and listening skills by making productive contributions to classroom conversation;
- Develop research and writing skills, including creation of a bibliography, analysis of secondary literature, close reading of primary sources, and writing a well-organized paper that presents a single, coherent argument.

Required Texts

This semester, we will encounter scholarly monographs, novels, articles, and primary sources.

Adom Getachew, Worldmaking After Empire: The Rise and Fall of Self-Determination
Lara Putnam, Radical Moves: Caribbean Migrants and the Politics of Race in the Jazz Age
Ngũgĩ wa Thiong’o, The River Between

These books are available for purchase and rental at the Bookstore and are on reserve in the library. The remaining texts and assignments are available via Moodle.

Assignments

Along with classroom participation, your performance in the course will be evaluated through the following assignments (further information available on the course Moodle):

- Map Quiz Sept. 12 – On a blank world map, identify contemporary nation-states that won their independence from the British Empire
- Chronology Quiz Sept. 19 – On a timeline of the twentieth century, identify dates when nation-states won their independence from the British Empire

The Honor Principle and Classroom Conduct

At Reed, the honor principle governs the conduct of our community. Honor is not narrowly or negatively defined, but guides how we treat each other with fairness, respect, and dignity. These ideals must be expressed not simply in attitude, but in action.
Community requires participation, and to participate, you must show up. I expect attendance. If you have a reasonable excuse for missing class—religious holidays, illness, or family emergency—it is your responsibility to let me know ahead of time. Unexcused absences will negatively affect your grade, and more than one unexcused absence could lead to failing the course.

A successful conference depends on prepared and active participants. Please come to class having completed the assigned reading. Bring the readings, as well as a means of taking notes to class. For discussion, give the conference your undivided attention by turning off your cell phone. Consider how you can foster thoughtful dialogue. When you speak, support your claims with examples from the texts or reference to remarks made by others. Attentive listening is as important as speaking to facilitating conference discussion. Dismissive or hostile comments will not be tolerated. Food is prohibited in the classroom, unless you have brought something to share with everyone.

The honor principle not only applies to our discussions in class, but also to your written work. Your work must be your own. It is your responsibility (with the help of others) to learn the standards of proper citation and attribution. In this course, we will use the Chicago Manual of Style’s Notes and Bibliography system for citations.

Accessibility
Each of you has necessary conditions that make your participation in conference possible, and I understand that you might have financial circumstances, disabilities, chronic conditions, or contingencies that make it difficult for you to participate in class in the way that you would wish. Here are some resources to make sure you have the assistance you need to succeed in this class.

- Emergency loan funds: Business Office, Eliot Hall 306 & 308
- Reed Community Pantry: https://www.reed.edu/seeds/reed-community-pantry/index.html
- Reed Academic Support Services: https://www.reed.edu/academic_support
- Reed Health and Counseling Services: https://www.reed.edu/health_center

If you need assistance or accommodation, please don’t hesitate to see me to discuss resources that are available to you. If you have not yet met Disability Support Services to document your disability and create specified accommodations, we can discuss this process in office hours.

Communication
In addition to treating each other honorably in conference, I encourage you to help and support each other outside of the classroom. I am also available to talk about the readings, your papers, how conference is going, etc. When I am in my office and my door is open, you are welcome to come in. I also have confirmed office hours listed on this syllabus. If you cannot make it to my office hours, please send me an email proposing a few possible times to meet (Monday–Friday, 9 AM–5 PM). Email should primarily be used to inform me of an absence or to schedule a meeting outside of office hours. For everything else, let us talk in person.
