The British Empire was built on migrations both forced and free, and in this course we will examine particular migration stories in wider imperial and global contexts. Some of the migrants that we will examine include settler colonists, enslaved persons, transported radicals, colonial officers, missionaries, merchants, and indentured and migrant laborers. The course will present a broad chronological survey of the British imperial world since 1700, paying attention to political, economic, social, and cultural dynamics.

The final project for this course will be a digital exhibition, collaboratively created by students.

Digital Humanities

In this course, we will engage with the methods and principles of digital humanities. The majority of the assignments are available digitally and the final project for the course is a collectively created digital exhibition. These digital resources, tools, and projects will help us engage in the traditional task of the historian: the contextualization of particular objects in more general economic, political, and social circumstances to explain historical events and formations.

Digital humanities workshops are integrated into the course syllabus. They will be led by:

Angie Beiriger  Digital Assets Librarian  beiriger@reed.edu
(L191)  Office Hours: Monday 3–4 PM, Friday 10–11 AM

Trina Marmarelli  Director of Instructional Technology Services  marmaret@reed.edu
(ETC 219)  Office Hours: Thursday 10–11 AM, Friday 2–3 PM, and by appointment

The Honor Principle and Classroom Conduct

At Reed, the honor principle governs the conduct of our community. Honor is not narrowly or negatively defined, but guides how we treat each other with fairness, respect, and dignity. These ideals must be expressed not simply in attitude, but in action.

Community demands participation, and to participate, you must show up. If you have a reasonable excuse for missing class—religious holidays, illness, or family emergency—it is your responsibility to let me know ahead of time. Unexcused absences will negatively affect your grade, and more than one unexcused absence could lead to failing the course.

A successful conference depends upon prepared and active participants. For discussions, give the conference your undivided attention by turning off your cell phone and putting it away. Food is prohibited in the classroom, unless you bring enough to share with everyone. Bring the assigned readings, as well as a means of taking notes. Consider how you can foster thoughtful dialogue. When you speak, support your claims with examples from the texts. Attentive listening is as important as speaking to facilitating conference discussion. Dismissive or hostile comments will not be tolerated.

The honor principle not only applies to our discussions in class, but also to your written work. Your work must be your own. It is your responsibility (with the help of others) to learn the standards of proper citation and attribution. In this course, we will use the Chicago Manual of Style’s Notes and Bibliography system.

Computers in Class

You are required to bring a computer to class for all Digital Humanities workshops, and you may also need to bring your computer to class for ordinary conference meetings as the majority of our class readings are digital. If you do not have access to a laptop, please let me know and we will borrow one for you.

A conference is a collective experience and requires the active participation of all members. Together we will create a computing policy that balances use of computers with being present in our shared conversation.
Accommodation
If you require accommodation to complete course work due to a disability, please see me as soon as possible to discuss your DSS-specified accommodations. If you have not yet met Disability Support Services to prepare a plan, we can also discuss this process in office hours.

Communication
In addition to treating each other honorably in conference, I encourage you to help and support each other outside of the classroom. When I am in my office, my door is open, and you are welcome to come in. I also have confirmed office hours during which we can talk about the readings, your papers, how conference is going, etc. If you cannot make it to my office hours, please send me an email proposing a few possible times to meet (Monday–Friday, 9 AM–5 PM). Email should only be used to inform me of an absence or to schedule a meeting outside of office hours. For everything else, let us talk in person.

Assignments
In addition to the assigned readings and conference discussion, the major work for this course will be the development of a digital exhibition. You will be asked to adhere to the best practices of asset management as well as demonstrate knowledge regarding the British Empire. This project contains five components.

Exhibit Page: 2000 word essay on an object. The final draft of the essay will appear on the exhibit page, and will describe and analyze the object, contextualize it historically, and offer an argument about the object’s significance. Building towards this essay, you will be required to write three subsidiary essays: an object analysis, a bibliographic essay, and a historiographical essay.

Group Page: The course is divided into five categories of migrants (settlers, enslaved Africans, colonial officials, indentured laborers, and metropolitan migrants). Each object belongs to one of these categories. The students whose objects are in the same group will collectively write a 2000 word essay introducing the main themes of the migrant category and relating the objects within the group to each other.

Exhibition main page: The class as a whole will collectively write a 2000 word essay that introduces the themes of the class and orients a viewer to the various categories and objects in the digital exhibition.
