

New Frontiers in the Study of Medieval China

The Inaugural Workshop at Rutgers University: On Muzhiming

Co-Organizers: Jessey Choo (Rutgers), Alexei Ditter (Reed College), and Yang Lu (Peking University)

Sponsors: Tang Research Foundation • Department of Asian Languages and Cultures of Rutgers University • Rutgers Center for Chinese Studies

Date/Time: Friday, May 15 and Saturday, May 16, 2015, 9 A.M. — 5:00 P.M.

Place: Brower Commons A and B at the College Ave Campus of Rutgers University

Participants:

Jessey Choo (Rutgers University)

Alexei Ditter (Reed College)

Paul Kroll (University of Colorado-Boulder)

LU Yang (Peking University)

David McMullen (University of Cambridge)

SHI Rui (Peking University)

Anna Shields (University of Maryland-Baltimore County)

Timothy Davis (Brigham Young University)

Tineke D'Haeseleer (Princeton University)

JIA Jinhua (University of Macao and IAS)

LUO Xin (Peking University and IAS)

SHI Jie (University of Chicago)

ZHU Yuqi (Peking University)

YAO Ping (California State University-Los Angeles)

Description:

The workshop focuses on one of the most important and influential new sources in the study of medieval China, muzhiming — stone slabs interred within a tomb and typically inscribed with a biography, an account of the burial, and a rhymed eulogy. Excavated by the thousands in recent decades, muzhiming are a unique cultural form of commemorative epigraphy through which contemporary scholars can explore a diverse range of artistic, literary, religious, and economic practices. This workshop will serve as a forum for exploring fundamental questions about the nature of and approaches to muzhiming. Bringing together leading U.S. and international scholars studying medieval China and muzhiming from distinct disciplinary perspectives, this workshop seeks, by means of conversations begun over discussion of the translation and close reading of specific muzhiming and the broader questions and challenges these examples raise, to generate methodologies and resources for future research on an aspect of medieval China often neglected in Western scholarship.

The seminar is open to all faculty and graduate students, but RSVP is required (by sending an e-mail to nieh013@gmail.com) by May 8, 2015.

For up-to-date information, please visit <http://asianstudies.rutgers.edu/events>