

France: Sciences Po-Lille

The program of Sciences Po in Lille offers a selective educational environment for students interested in studying the various political and economic issues impacting France and the European Union. In addition, Reed students may take classes at the University of Lille III, which offers courses in humanities and social sciences taught in both French and English. There is no language requirement, but there are plenty of opportunities to learn French through language classes and integration with the local cultures. This program is located near the border between France and Belgium and is situated centrally between Brussels, Paris and London.
